

Dusk shattered against the blackouts, sun acid burnt to ash.

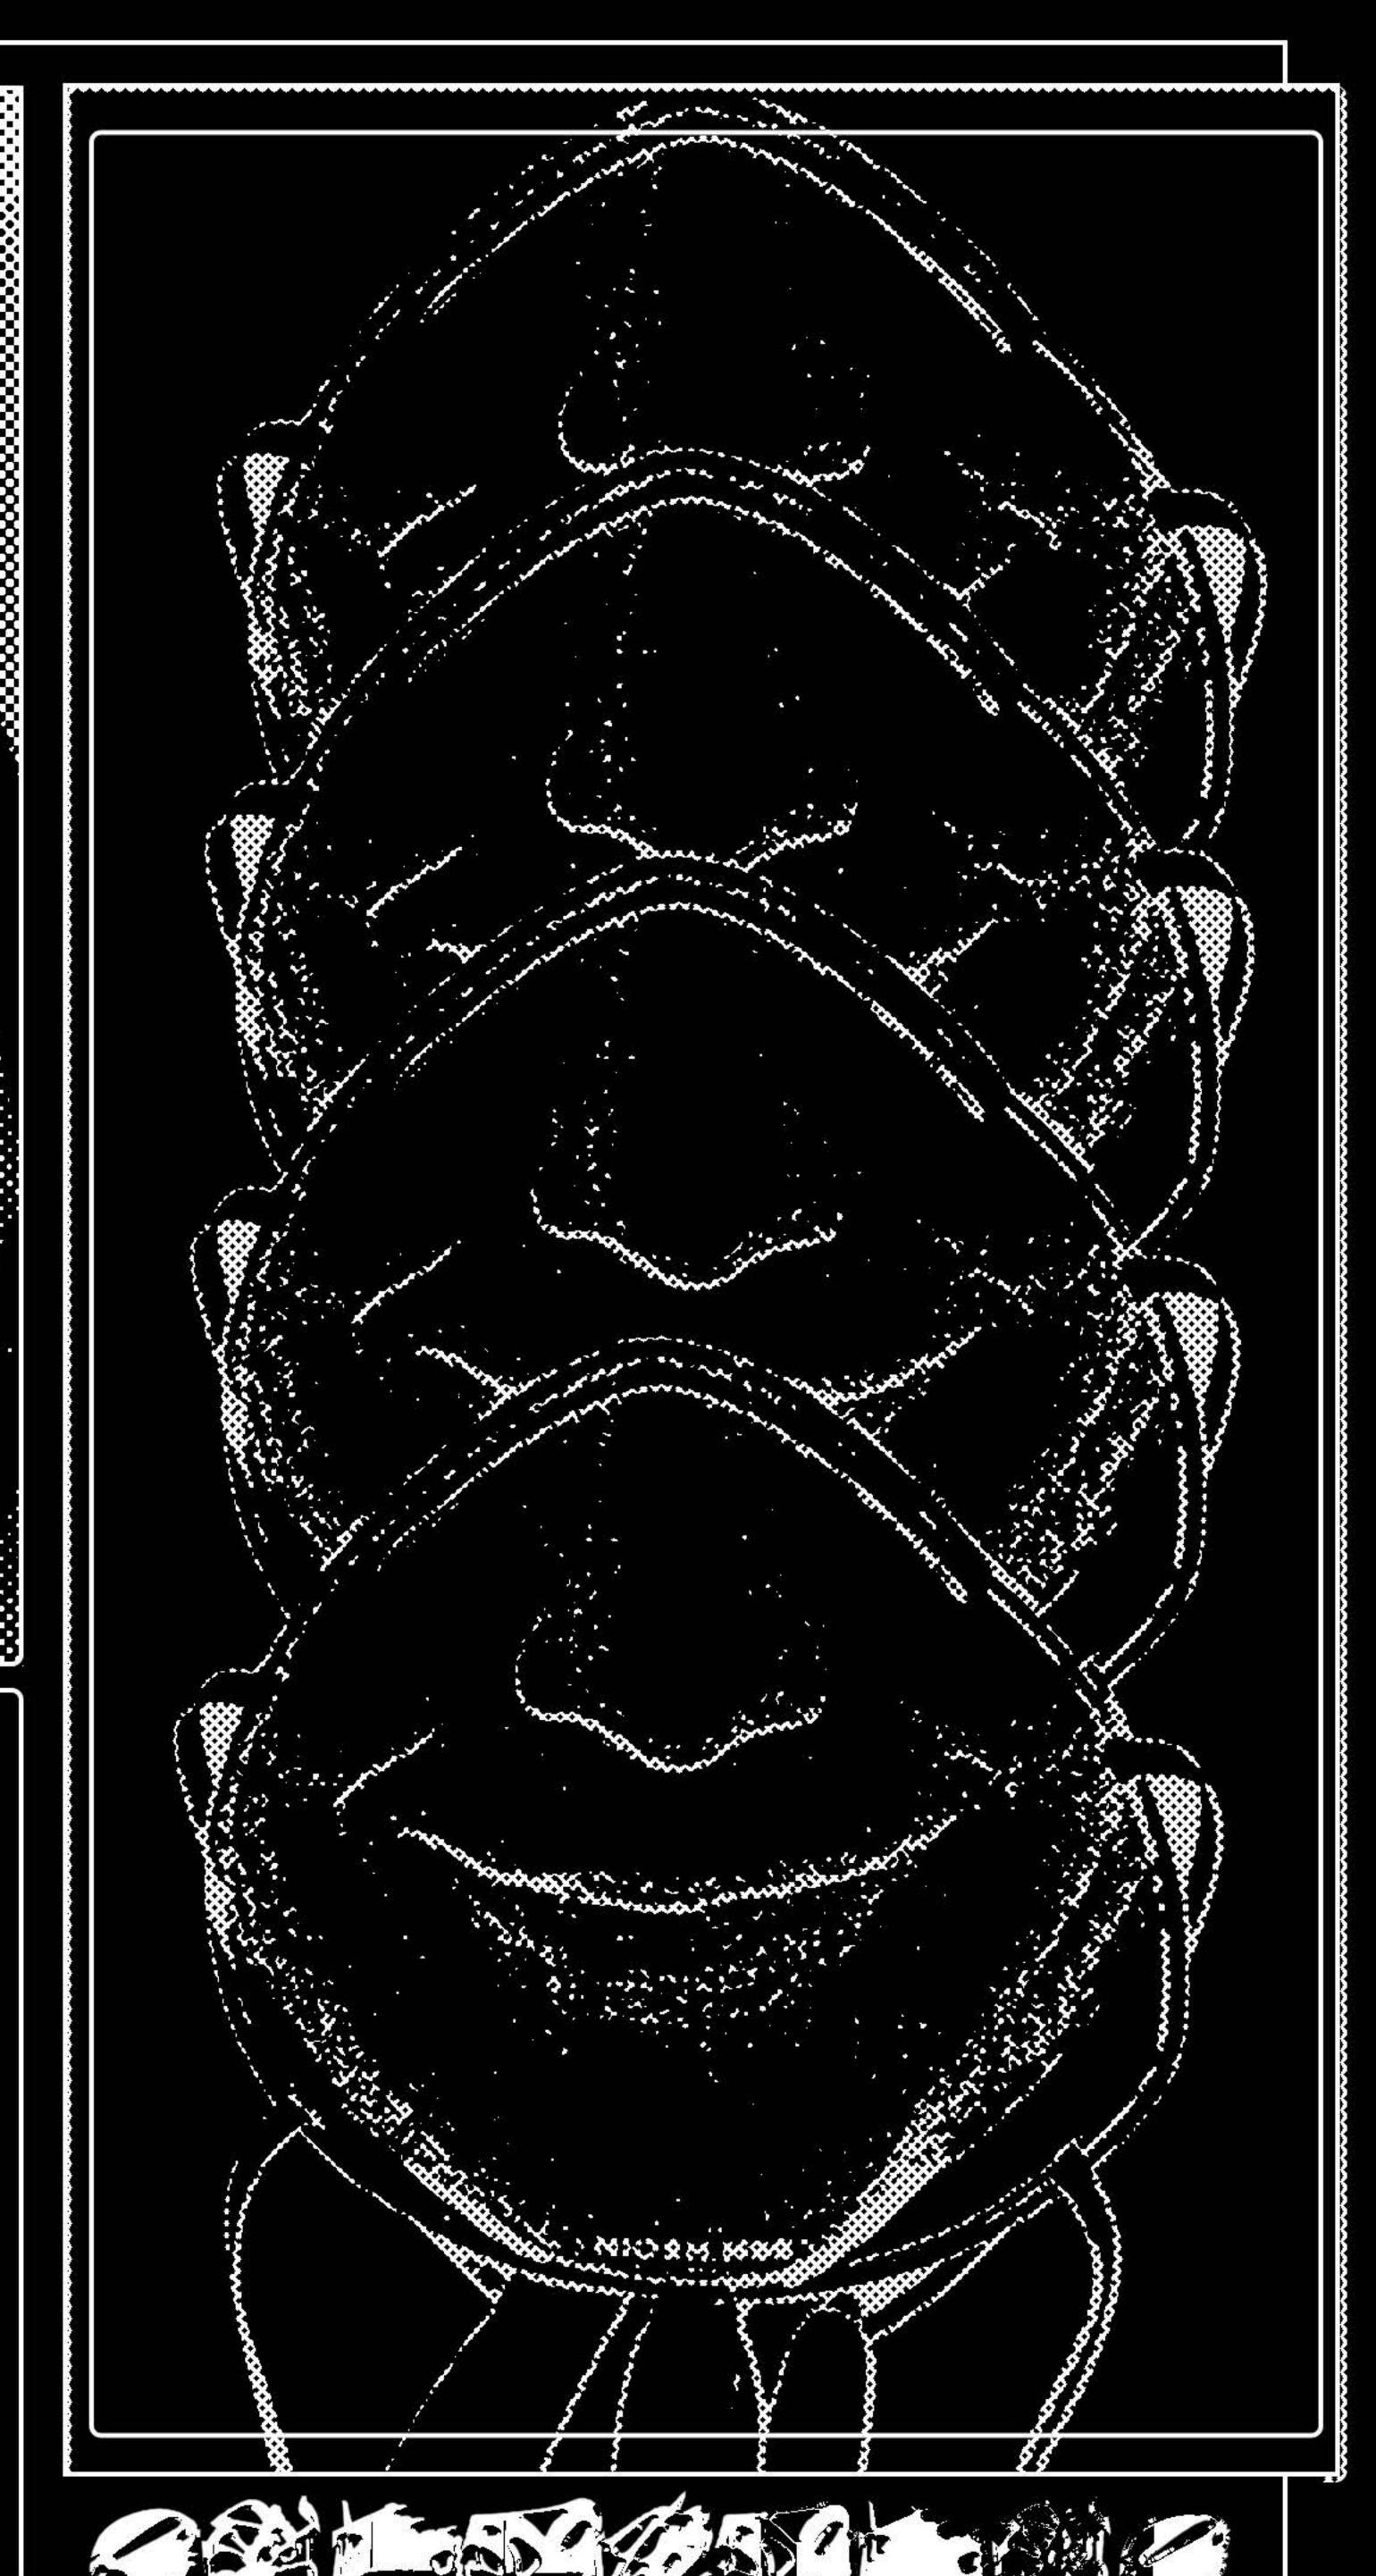

Ferried intravenous through warehouse valleys;

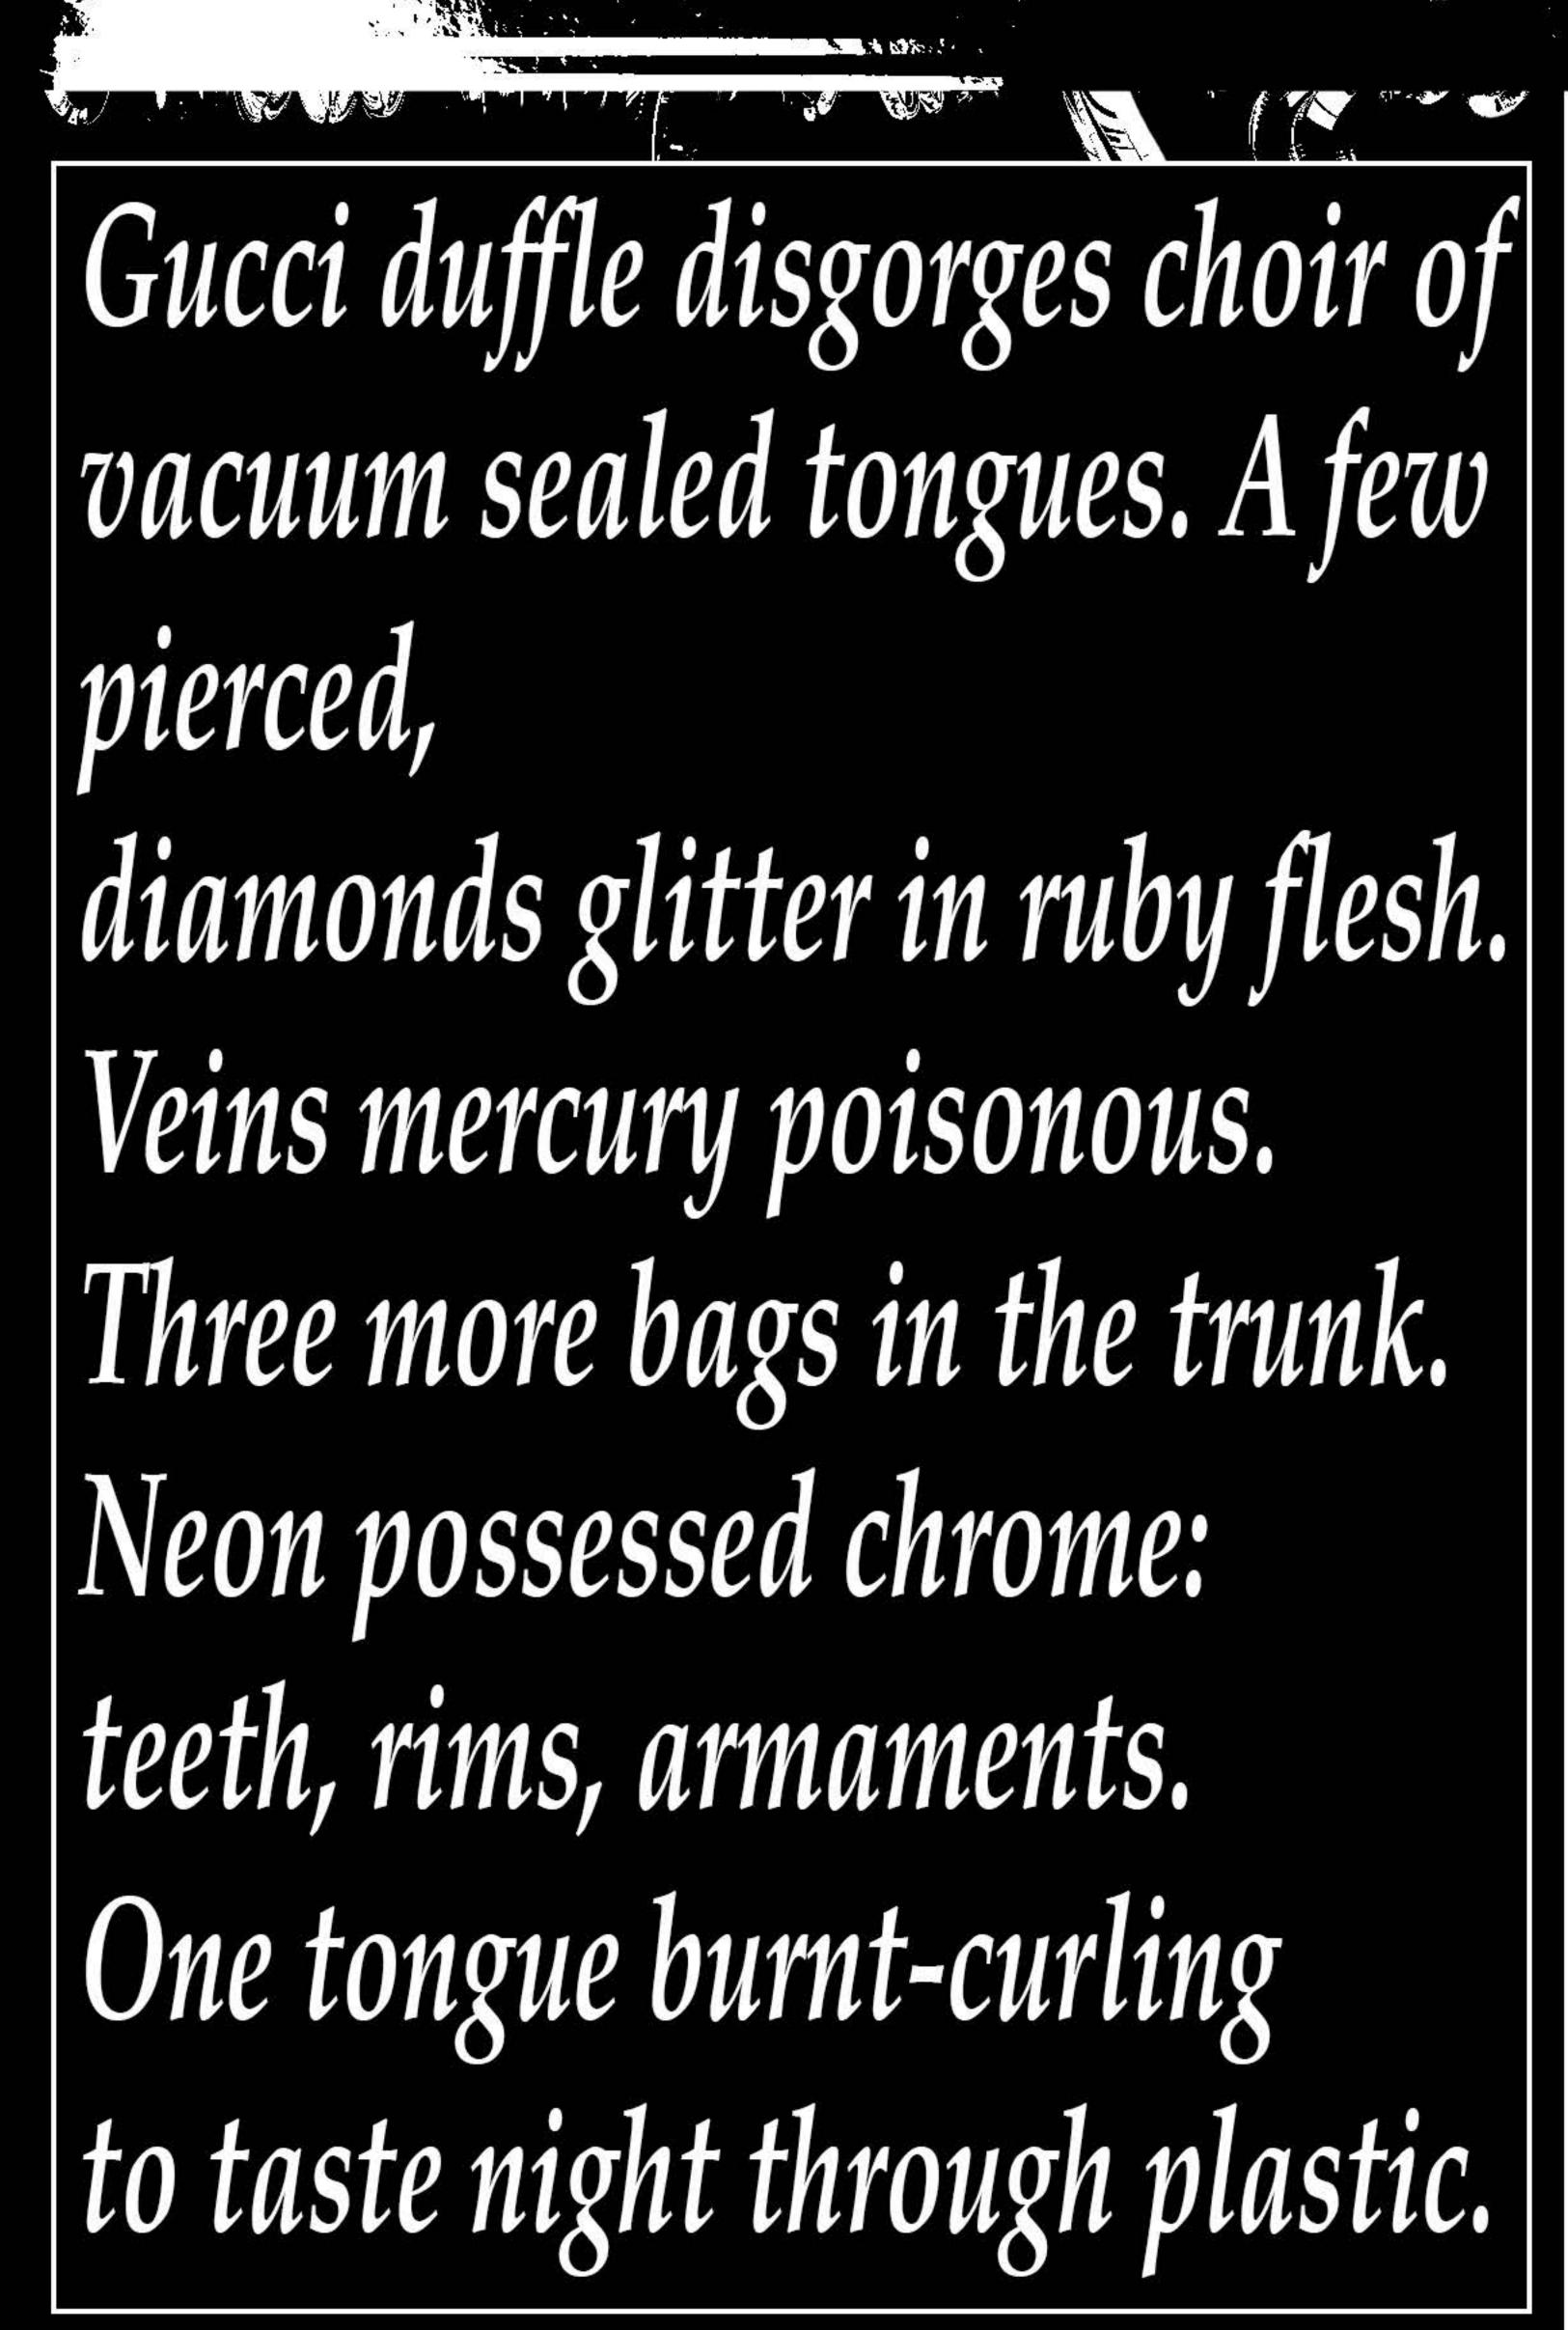

murdered out smile and exhaust laced lungs.

A briefcase on the seat beside you, engine humming through your flesh. Pills ground to slush between your teeth.

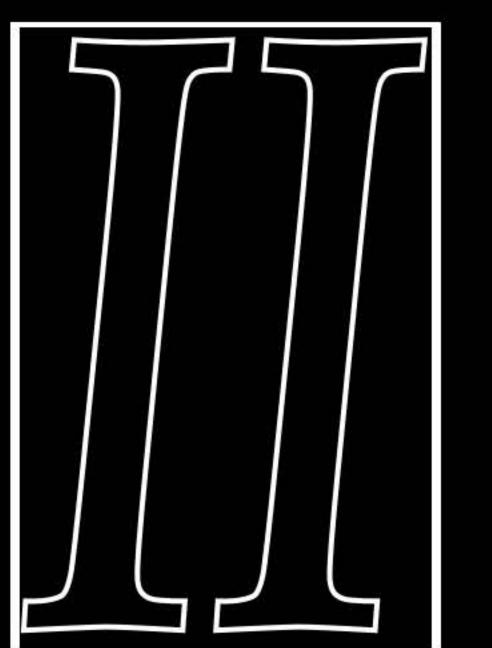

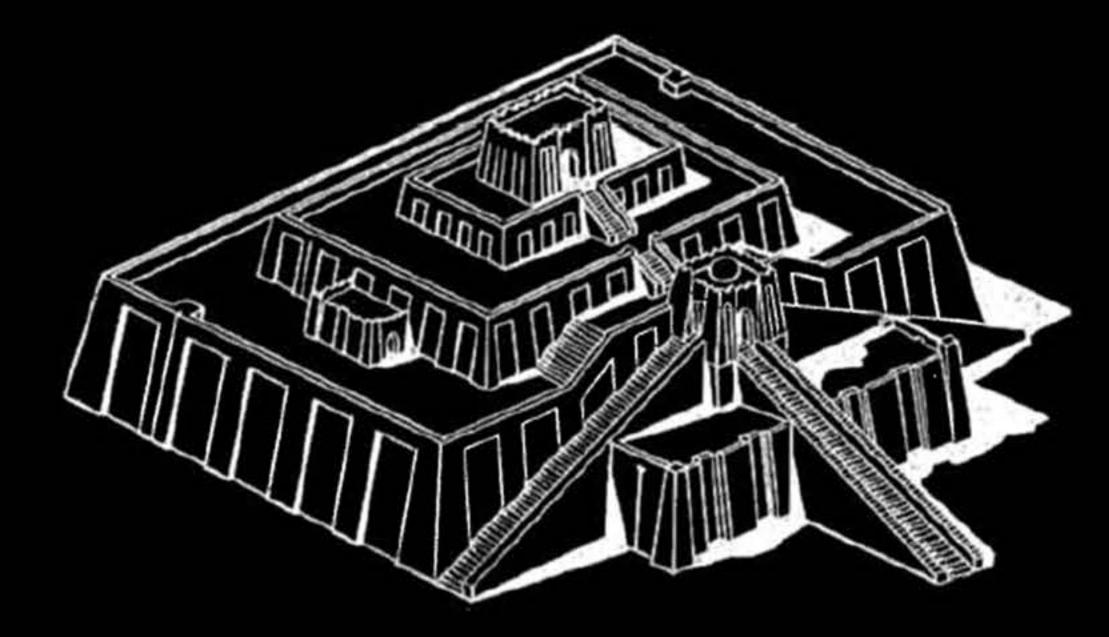

Hexes oil-sputtering off fingers as you accept bricks of cash. All around you:

soft ANGEL skull
cracks ceramic against brick blood tar thick glistening
warm on your hands
soaks thin shirt
alleyways
pillars of heaven
procession around you

Wrench open jaws
jaw to throat
skull to nape of neck
past rows of teeth
grab what lies
thrashing multitudes

You flick off your bathroom light, face dissolving slowly on the mirrors tongue. Features melt to pale cut lozenges, dripping saliva. STEP ONE - INCISION ALONG FRENULUM Flip the light back on -quick-before it swallows. In your hallway the walls sweat algae tinged condensation. Trace your hand along, feel it sting small cuts on the webbing between fingers.

A voice on the phone tells you about a club you'll be at later.

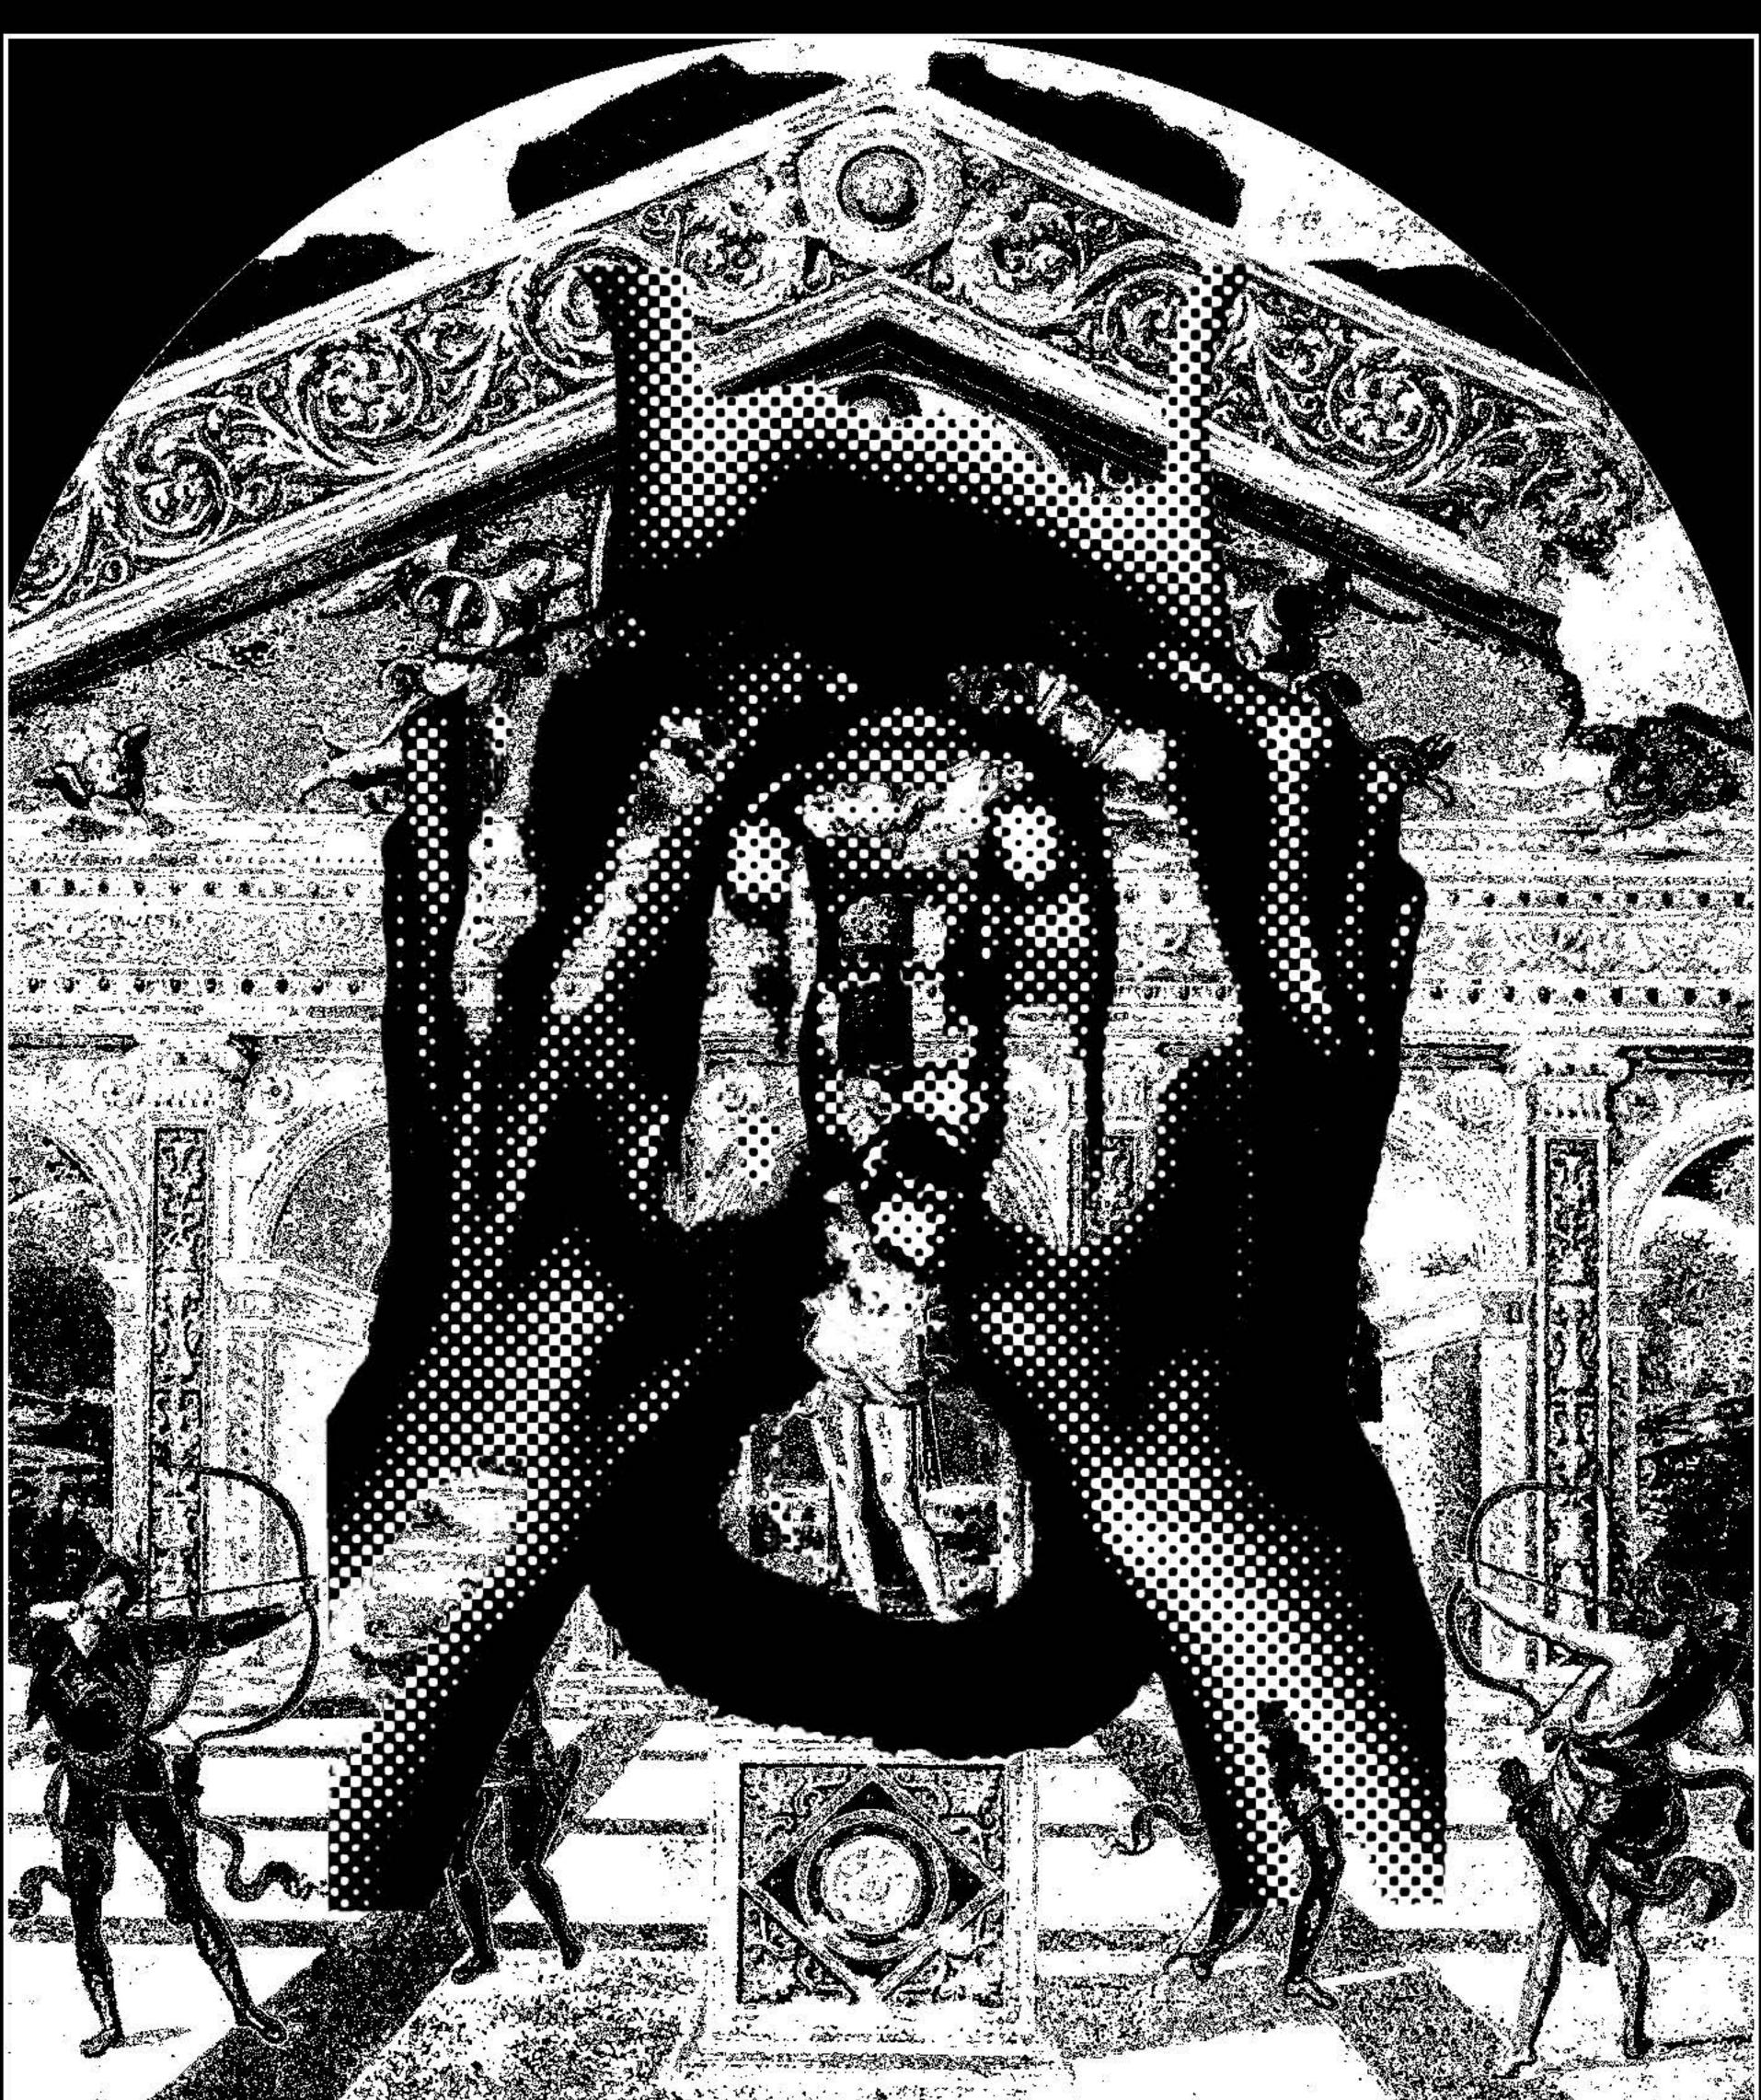

Kitchen resplendent with a thousand splinters of light.

Rest vour forehead on the table for a while. Get dressed.

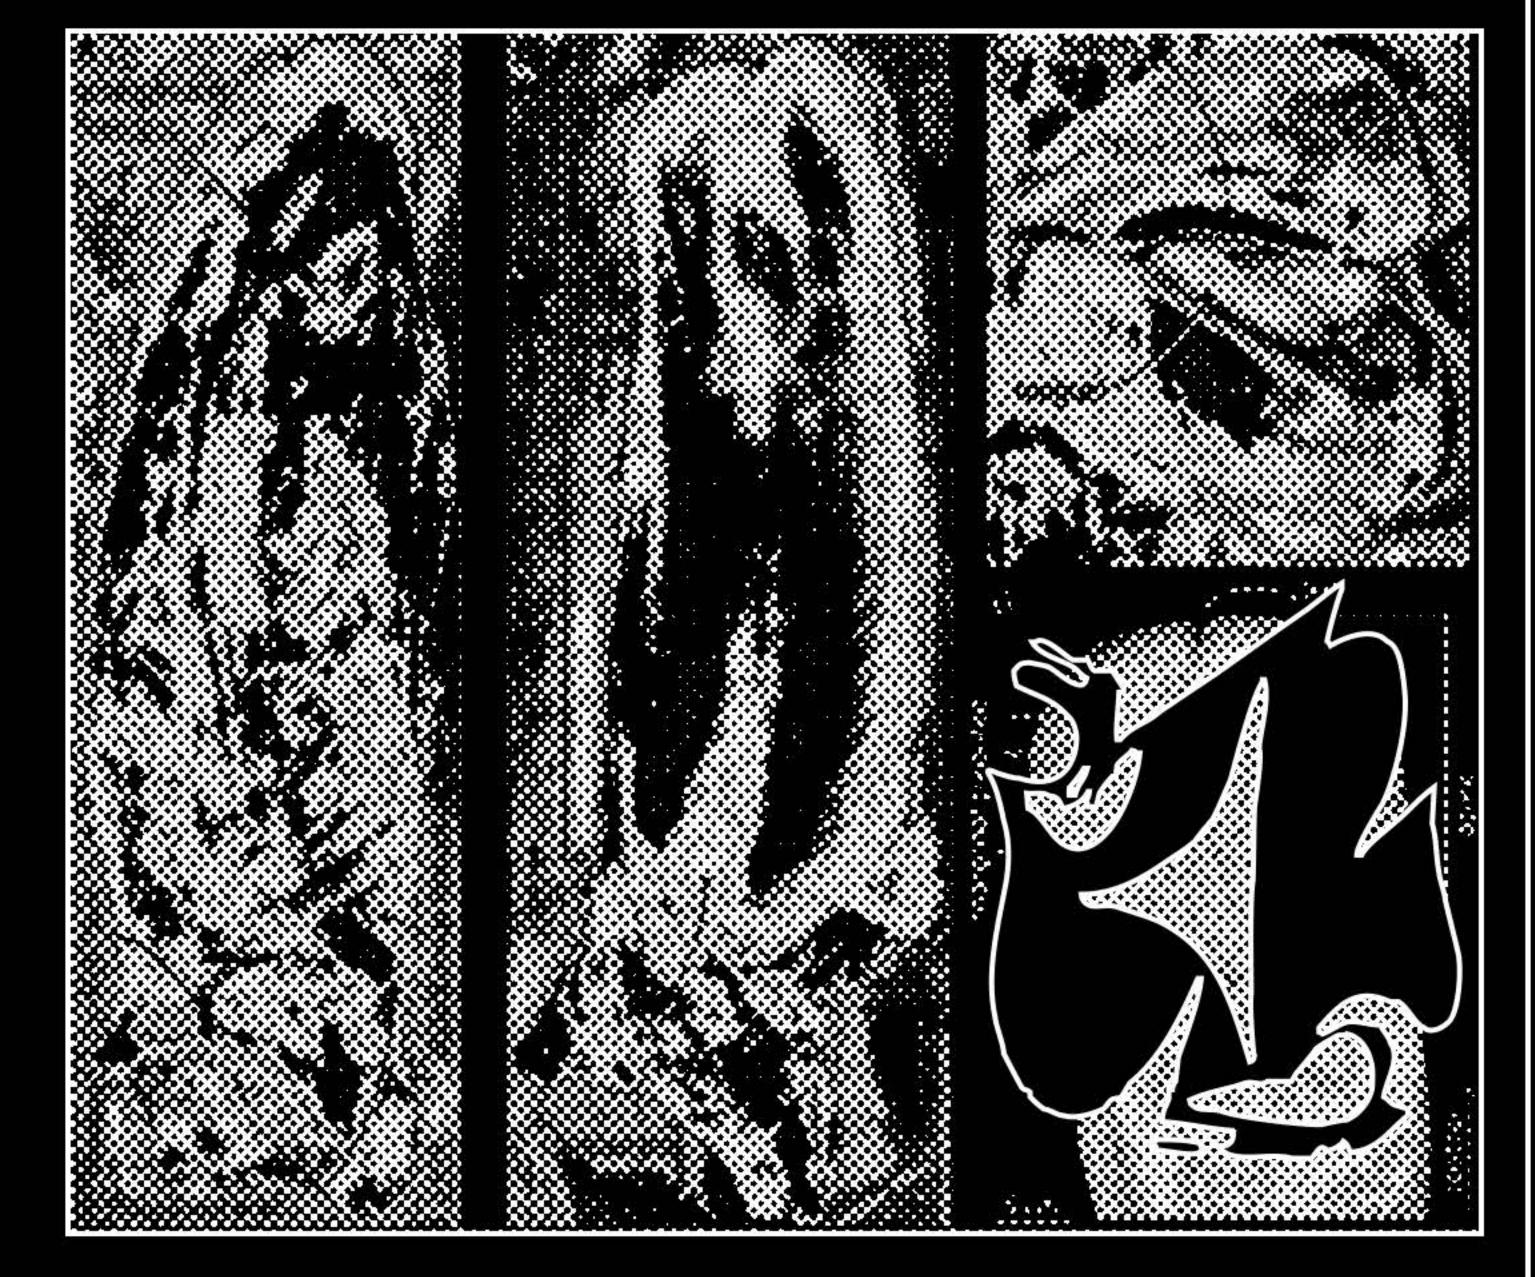

Clouds are the insides of a guns mouth, cavernous, rifled steel soft palate undulating, drool of hot thick rain. Voices telling you how gorgeous you are, voices offering you things that burn demons down your throat. Inside and it's all shredded choirs and gabber kicks and daggers reflected and vacant sockets. AREOLE: letters malignant neon melt through swaying plastic sheets. Downsampled organs like demons through grass. Join sway of ecstatic flesh. Hands caress. Sound like scream like throb of blood like god.

Acid at back of throat.

STEP TWO - SPREAD SUBMANDIBULAR FLESH

Lock the bathroom door and stare into glassy eyes. Trace your cold flattened face with lacquered nail. Fumble your hand across the wall -don't look away-and flick the light switch. Dissolve. Ignore the knocks on the door, float in darkness. Flip the lights back on and smile into now vacant glass.

Back out into the hallway.

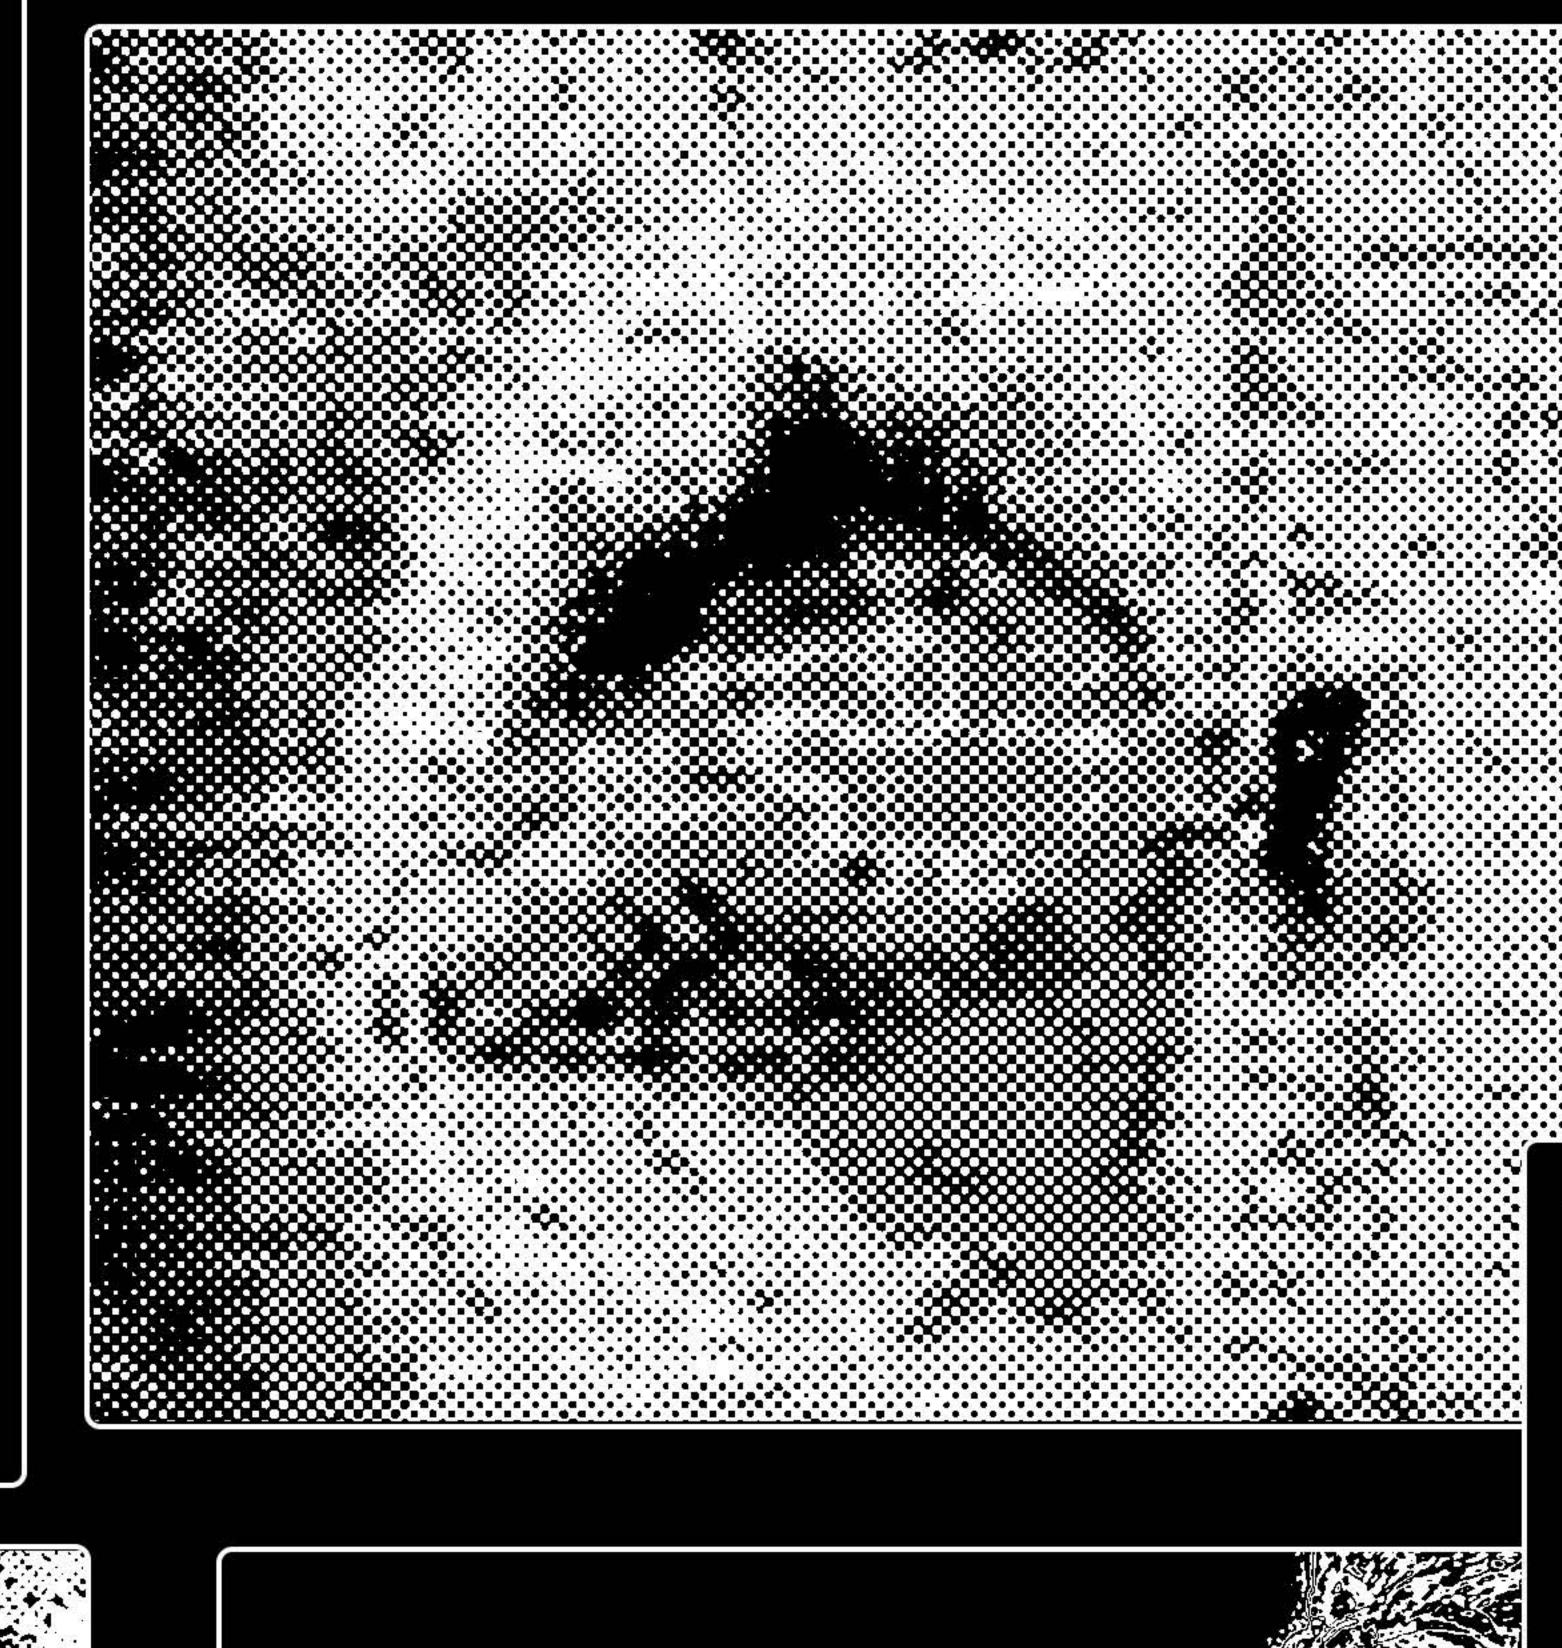

Throbbing brittle din, burnt out speakers.

Poorly encoded conversations at the bottom of your vision.

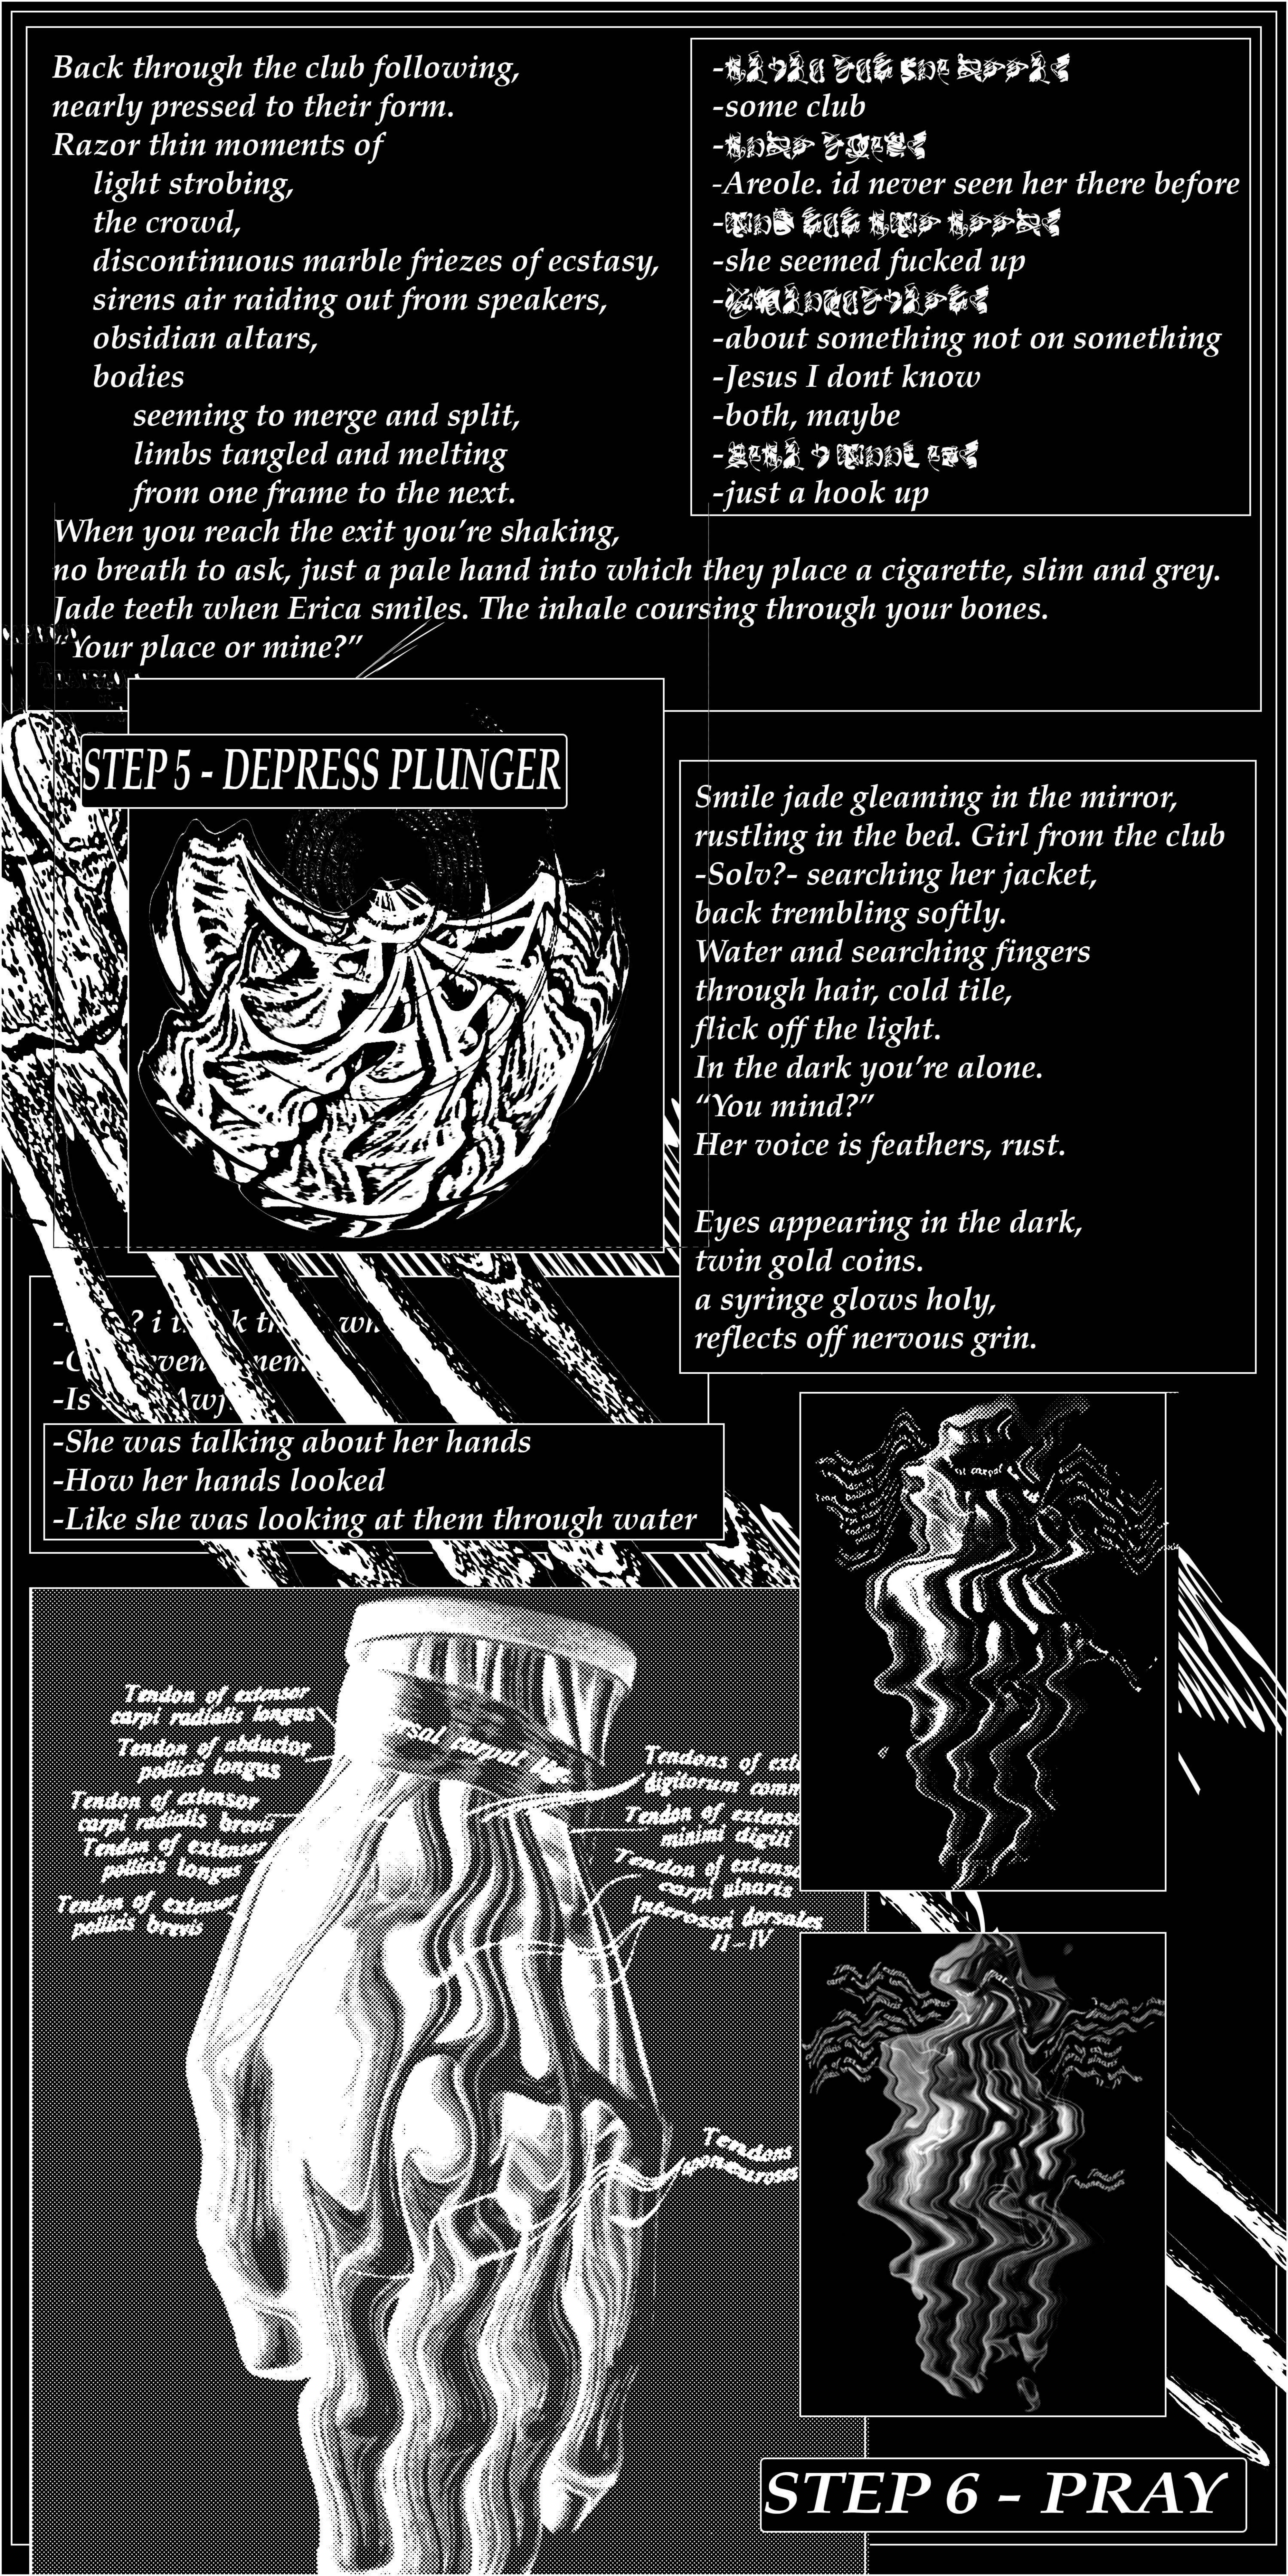

Everything compressed and fuzzy and whirling slush of faces.

Shoals of flesh. A hand at your elbow pulling you out into fanged concrete wind.

"Jade" an offered hand phosporescent, a metallic scratch, a flare of light, smoke. Eyes dawn before you, adjusting to the dark. "Looked like you needed some fresh air." Lungs already smoke possessed, you can't tell if they're joking. Claw out a laugh, "Yeah its pretty awful in there." nails pick at elbow. Gaze darting manic. They jerk their head, shower of chiming jewelry in your ears "You wanna..?"
